Evolution of Karate dates back to Before Christ era. It is believed that an Indian monk Bodhidharma (Daruma Daishi in Japanese and Ta-mo in Chinese) significantly contributed in its evolution from India to China (circa 540 AD) and subsequently to Okinawa where the art evolved as Shuri-te, Naha-te and Tomari-te. Evolution process further continued in mainland Japan in 1930s where it was finally termed as Karate-do or the art of empty hand by O-sensei Gichin Funakoshi.

In-post World War II era, Karate became immensely popular around the world and further progressed as a sport. The first ever World Competition was organised in 1968 in Mexico City by group headed by Mr Sasakawa and Sensei Hidetaka Nishiyama.

On October 10, 1970, the first World Championship was organised in Nippon Budokan in Tokyo, Japan and World Union of Karate Organisations (the former name of WKF World Karate Federation) was proposed by Sensei Vladimir Jorga and adopted by the general assembly.

In 1972 in Paris, France, the General Assembly elected Mr. Jacques Delcourt as its President and Sensei Ilija Jorga was elected as its 1st Vice President. However, serious conflict of interests on technical issues, organisational structure was divided into two.

World Karate Federation (WKF formerly known as WUKO) headed by Mr. Jacques Delcourt and International Traditional Karate Federation (ITKF formerly known as IAKF) headed by Sensei Hidetaka Nishiyama.

After series of deliberations and post 1996 Osaka Declaration, WKF was granted the recognition of amateur karate governing body for General Karate or Sports Karate by the International Olympic Committee. Further, the Osaka Declaration of 1996 paved way for Karate inclusion in Olympic fold.

OUR PROGRAMS

Every sports practitioner dreams to touch a new apex and aspire for the stardom in their respective sports. Professional sports such as Football let their player discover their horizons, fulfill their dreams and live a celebrity life. But Karate, an amateur sport fails to fulfill this aspect. The athletes pay for participating in tournaments and everything is organized from the fee received from participants whereas professional sports players receive for playing and additionally receive facilities and opportunities.

This continues in Karate due to many reasons, professional approach in event and media management are lacking, boring from spectators' point of view, no career opportunities, no recognition, no fame. Karate-ka pay for rest of their lives. Situation is very tricky for poor students and even trickier for female athletes. Arranging tournament fee is a cumbersome task to which maximum of athletes give up.

“Catch them Young”, is a slogan often ranted across World but hardly implemented with long term sustainable plans. BoutsPro shares the principles of vBelieve Sports, “Nurture the Future” by infusing scholarship to our young talent filtered through multiple programme of CuppaSchoola. Scholarship for rank holders is as
